Re: Proceeding 11-75

Aside from the questions of impropriety surrounding John Hagee, I have deep reservations about the proposed sale of WMFE to Daystar. I never have difficulty finding evangelical programs or religious dogma on television. I do, however, have trouble finding quality programming uninfluenced by corporate interests or social bias.

I rely on stations like WMFE for real news, not mainstream media's ill-informed opinions and grandstanding they refer to as news, and quality shows like Nature, Masterpiece Classic and so many more that are informative, thought-provoking and, yes, entertaining (all without having to reference Britney Spears or Jersey Shore).

Approving the sale of WMFE to Daystar is detrimental to our community's education, tolerance, and awareness. As a taxpayer-supported "independent United States government agency" I urge you to exercise prudence and consider what is best for our community.

I trust that the FCC will make the right decision. Your agency has much familiarity with Daystar's operations after your multi-year investigation of their alleged questionable practices.

Sincerely,

Maria McCluskey
